Can art be truly global or are art worlds primarily local? What role can international exhibitions and residencies play in the establishment of genuine cultural exchange? How do artists benefit from exhibiting their art in different cultural contexts? By what independent or collaborative means can artists, curators, galleries and museums establish meaningful global links?

In association with The world in painting (26 July - 9 November 2008), a Heide Museum of Modern Art / Asialink touring exhibition, Heide Public Programs invites you to join an international panel of artists and curators for a lively discussion of the benefits and challenges of cultural exchange.

Speakers include: Sakarin Krue-On and Kamin Lertchaiprasert (Thai artists exhibiting in The world in painting); John Young (Hong Kong born artist, living in Australia); Jayne Dyer, consultant, Red Gate Gallery Beijing; and Zara Stanhope, Senior Curator, Heide Museum of Modern Art.

The world in painting (26 July - 9 November 2008) brings together twelve artists from Australia, Thailand, the Philippines and Vietnam. The Australian artists featured are: John Citizen, Amanda Davies, Dena Georgetti, Raafat Ishak, James Morrison, Nancy Naninurra Napanangka, Elizabeth Newman and Boxer Milner Tjampitjin. A selection of these artists' works previously toured to Chiang Mai University Art Museum, Chulalongkorn University Art Center in Bangkok, Yuchengco Museum in Manila and the Vietnam Fine Arts Museum in Hanoi. As a result of this tour Asian artists Luisito Cordero, Sakarin Krue-On, Kamin Lertchaiprasert and Lê Quốc Việt have been selected to join the project in an exclusive presentation at Heide.
